TWILIGHT MUSINGS.

Welcome hour of pensive twilight, Bringing calm and sweet tepose, As in beauty fades the sunlight, Eve her mantle round us throws. Then how sweet affection's greeting, Gentle tones and fond embrace, Blissful moments, all too fleeting, On our hearts their memory trace.

O! when stars are sof ly gleaming Heavenly radiance from above, Then the sprit, sadly dreaming, Whispers to its cherished love Mournful tales of joys departed, Bright hopes crushed and pleasures o'er-Dear ones gone! The broken hearted-Earth can never weary more!

Now on fancy's tireless pinions Soars the spirit far away— Wanders on from earth's dominions
To the realms of perfect day—
Lists the sweet, melodious trilling Of the bright, mimortal throng, Righly blending voices thrilling In one joyous, heaven-taught song! May life's sunlight fade screnely

Into twilight's softened glow-Countless stars shine forth as queenly, Cooling waters gently flow; Faithful friends be ever near me, As approaches dreary night, By their love and truth to cheer me, In my weal or wee unite!

Recipe for the Headache. -- Sage tea will often give relief in cases of severe headache. It is stimulating, causing a rapid circulation of the blood in the veins, which relieves the brain from a flow to that organ; it also causes perspiration when taken freely. With food, sage rea is an excellent substitute for tea or coffee, and by some persons it is preferred as more palatable, without any regard to its healthful effects.

It is a question of no small importance for the afflicted to decide, which, of all the sarsaparillas and other
